What we do:

SOSCuisine.com is a breakthrough Meal & Grocery Planning service. The number of users is growing steadily and, currently, some 200 000 Canadian families are using the service on a weekly basis. SOSCuisine.com provides smart menu suggestions that match the users' personal preferences to the local availability of fresh products and supermarket specials.

The service is being further developed to address the needs of people with medical conditions influenced by food, such as diabetes, heart condition and others. SOSCuisine.com will be the 1st service to offer the complete set of features required for this application. This will also initiate a product leadership role for non-medical applications.

Are you right for us?

If you're what we're looking for, this job will be fun, challenging, and fulfilling. And you'll even get paid for it ;-)

You are passionate about programming, eager to learn new things, and love to push the boundaries of what is possible.

What happens when you are asked to do something you don't yet have the skills to do? Are you able to learn on your own and extend your knowledge into new areas? Show us that you know how to teach yourself, and you will already have impressed us.

You have exacting self standards, are diligent and attentive to detail. You have an acute sense of responsibility. For you, few experiences rival the feeling of a job well done.

We want a team player, someone who can see the bigger picture and move toward it with initiative. You are intellectually sharp, can manipulate abstract concepts with ease, and are good at analyzing and modeling. You are articulate enough to communicate effectively your subtlest ideas, and believe in the importance of proper documentation.

You have two or more years experience in a professional environment, doing software development. You're way beyond cutting your teeth with PHP (object oriented PHP4) and MySQL/XHTML/CSS/Javascript. You have practical knowledge of the SVN version control system or equivalent (CVS, Rational ClearCase, etc.), and of UML.

Some gifts that would set you apart from the pack:

A keen interest in the subject matter: Food/Nutrition/Health. An ability to communicate in both French and English. An experience with the Apache Web Server and UNIX/Linux environments. As well as an ability to type with your feet (twice as efficient!).

Your playground:

You will re-invent how nutrition reaches out to people, by evolving the SOS Cuisine.com website through the development of new features, and maintenance and improvements of existing features:

- ✓ Doing the top-down requirements analysis from the business objectives
- ✓ Doing the detailed design of deliverables in accordance with functional specifications. Document the design specifications when required.
- ✓ Programming the features and interfaces of deliverables, in accordance with internal technical standards. Document the code and test specifications.
- ✓ Delivering the developed code via a version control system, where each developer has his own branch.
- ✓ Testing deliverables produced by other developers.
- ✓ Integrating your own deliverables as well as those developed by the other developers.

Yes you can?

So if you are a PHP/MySQL/XHTML/CSS/Javascript WIZARD (this means GOD LIKE CODING SKILLS, not that you read something about PHP one time, somewhere...), please send your resume and an interesting cover letter to: jobs [at] soscuisine.com
